The Great Trials of History

TRIAL OF THE MAFIA

It is close to twenty-three years ago that the death knell of the Mafia in America was sounded, rung by the best citizens of New Orleans in their fury of what they believed was a miscarriage of justice. This organization was originally a political one in Italy, but in this country it had degenerated into a band of assassins. New Orleans, in a measure, was its headquarters, and this city found the most difficulty in its suppression, and it was the people and not the law that brought it about. The means to the end of the organization was the murder of Chief of Police David C. Hennessy of New Orleans. The Mafia, or rather the Stopaghera, the proper name of the order, consisted of a large number of Italians, mostly Sicilian by birth, their early leader having been Giuseppe Esposito, who had been driven out of his own country by the Italian government. There had been a number of assassinations in New Orleans that were traceable to this organization, but no arrests had been made, for so secretly did the body work that it was impossible to detect them.

The capture of the brigand Esposito in 1881, and his surrender to the Italian government, resulted in several killings. The Stopaghera determined to avenge the killing of their comrade. Engaged in his search to weed out this murderous organization, Chief of Police Hennessy had no idea that he was being watched. He probably knew nothing of a certain Italian neighbor of his, Monasterio by name, lately arrived from abroad, occupying a shanty fifty yards from his house.

It was nearly time for Hennessy to spring the trap and to make a full exposure, when late one evening as he drew near home, a boy ran in front of him and gave a peculiar

MRS. LEANDER UTLEY DIES IN LOS ANGELES

Was Formerly Long Time Resident of Salt River Valley.

Residents in this city were yesterday advised of the death of Mrs. Leander Utley at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. C. L. Harris, in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Leander Utley was for a long time a resident of this valley, having come here with her husband in 1884, and was well known to nearly all the old residents of the city. For the past few years she had resided with her daughter in Los Angeles. She was aged about 76.

Mrs. Utley is survived by a brother, W. J. Murphy; two sons, A. A. Utley of Winslow and T. M. Utley of Superior, Wyo., and two daughters, Mrs. C. L. Harris of Los Angeles and Mrs. W. D. Fulwiler of this city.

Funeral services will be held from the mortuary chapel of Moore & McLellan on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, with Rev. Dr. Campbell of the Presbyterian church officiating. Interment will be at Evergreen cemetery.

whistle. The next moment the chief was a dying man. Bullets tore three cruel rents in his abdomen, his right knee and his left hand were shot through, and his face, arms and neck were frightfully mutilated.

Within ten minutes of the shooting the immigrant was seized in his shanty. Other arrests followed, but only eleven were held and only nine finally prosecuted. The trial proved that Hennessy's assassins hid in Monasterio's cottage and that an Italian boy was posted to notify them of Hennessy's approach. The deadly weapons were found, five with barrels sawed off and stocks hinged so that they could be doubled up and carried under the clothing.

Hennessy had been murdered on October 15, 1890, and the Italians who were arrested in connection with the deed remained in prison until the early part of March of the following year, when they were placed on trial before Judge Baker. The hearing of evidence requiring about a week. A verdict was rendered on Friday, March 13, 1891.

The judge, usually imperturbable, was observed, when the paper was handed him, to look at it a moment in stupefaction. No wonder. Six of the culprits were acquitted; in the case of three the jury disagreed, and not one was convicted. Some whispered "bribery," others "intimidation," but all agreed that such a farce was an outrage.

Awaiting a trial upon a second indictment and joyfully reckoning upon a similar result next time, the accused were again locked in their cells. At the moment the doors closed behind them a vigilance committee of well known citizens was writing a call for a mass meeting for the following morning at the Clay statue in New Orleans square.

The assemblage was so large at this meeting that it blocked the street cars and climbed upon them. What was the outcome of this meeting? The citizens took the law in their own hands. A mob—but in good order—started for the Parish prison, where the prisoners were confined. They battered down the doors. Nine of the prisoners were put to death in various ways by the mob and two of them were hanged outside of the prison walls.

The mob had unanimously denounced the verdict and declared that the jury had been bought. The grand jury, even on the day of the killing, had found indictments against two men charged with tampering with the jury. The jurors did not appreciate the public sentiment on the outside and were surprised at the popular indignation. The trial of the case had cost the city more than $30,000 and then was a miscarriage of justice.

The incident opened grave international complications which Secretary Blaine handled with skill. Twenty-five thousand dollars was finally distributed among the families of the murdered men. On March 17, three days after the prisoners were disposed of, several arrests were made for bribery of the jury, and on May 5, the grand jury, after an investigation for six weeks, indicted O'Malley and five associates for jury bribing and accused three of the jury of being bribed, but refused to indict the lawyers. On July 8, Bernard Glaudi was convicted of offering to bribe a juror. On July 24, the last Mafia bribery case was ended with a verdict of not guilty, and on October 9 the state abandoned the case against O'Malley, which finally settled the whole affair.

WILEY JONES FALLS AND BREAKS WRIST

Visiting Democrat Defies Laws of Gravity, Slips on Tiled Floor, Fractures Arm.

Wiley E. Jones, the Safford well known democratic war horse, succumbed yesterday to the law of gravity and sustained a broken wrist from the fall thereby—which was great.

It was while stepping into the elevator at the Goodrich building yesterday afternoon that Mr. Jones' foot slipped and he fell. He struck his left hand against the pavement and the bones snapped just above the wrist. Bystanders assisted him to the office of Dr. E. Payne Palmer, who patched up the hurts and sent the luckless one home to start his tedious recovery by a period of rest.

MIRTH MAN OPENS A NEW VEIN OF HUMOR

The Storyteller has discovered another reliable, copyrighted, copper-plated, strictly approved under the pure joke law source of mirth. It is the joint office of Colonel J. H. McLintock and the Amiable Andy Anderson, respectfully, and by virtue of long habit the postmaster and assistant postmaster of the city of Phoenix.

"Mr. Anderson, meet Mr. So-and-So, one of our RISING young attorneys," quoth the colonel yesterday.

"Rising," repeated Andy with just that sort of an accent, "is it the Mohave kind of rising?"

On being questioned as to the Mohave sort of "rising," Andy replied that that reminded him of an incident that had occurred in a little frontier store in Ash Fork many, many years ago.

A strapping Mohave buck strode into the emporium and said, "Gimme some 'come up.'"

The proprietor reached onto the shelves and grasped a can of baking powder. That was "come up" in the Mohave interpretation.

There is another joke in the federal building, though if you should laugh at it in the presence of the receiver of the United States land office disaster might follow.

A well known democratic politician entered the office of John J. Birdno yesterday. He observed the evidences of a noble ambition on the top lip of the receiver. "Are you trying to raise one, John?"

"Well, I'm not exactly trying to raise one, returned John caustically, but with that well known twinkle in his eye, "but you might say that I've just neglected to shave it."

Art Rick—that being Jo. E. Rick—is mighty cautious about money matters. He does not handle enough of it to make him careless like, for, although he is no longer a regular newspaperman, Rick is still closely allied to that business. Rick, you know, has just finished putting on the auto show, and a busy little citizen he is, too.

On Saturday night he signed a check for $30 on the Arizona Auto association's funds. Yesterday a bank clerk approached him in haste, interrupted him in the middle of a rhapsody on the Jacobs company's new show folk, and announced there were no funds in the depository. Rick then took fifteen minutes off to cast a flock of duck fits—and then hired an expensive automobile to hie him to Jack Holmes' place to find out what the what the what. He didn't discover Jack at the Overland garage, where the genial secretary-treasurer of the association generally foregoethers, so he went to Jack's house. He found Jack in bed. Jack had been ill since Saturday, and the do-re-mi that Rick had turned over to him as the result of the auto show was lying concealed in a cash box.

"Say, I'm an awful busy man these days," remarked Rickards yesterday. "I just finished the auto show. And do you know, some of the boys put me in a machine and took me home and introduced me to my wife. And say, do you know, she's a real nice little woman, too, and I'm gonna get better acquainted with her right away!"
